

The statue of the sower on top of the Capitol's dome is nearly 20 feet tall. He is shown scattering seed, to represent Nebraska's strong connections to agriculture. The golden color of the dome represents the sun, while the thunderbirds on the panels around the dome are Native American symbols that represent rain.